Gender Diversity in the European accountancy profession

An AFECA study with the support of FEE
Why a European benchmark on valorising women capital in the accountancy profession?

Initiated by AFECA (Association des Femmes diplômées d’Expertise Comptable Administrateurs), the French CPA women on board association, under the aegis of the President of the French Institute of Certified Public Accountants (CSOEC – Conseil supérieur de l’ordre des experts-comptables) Philippe Arraou, and with the support of the European Federation of Accountants (FEE – Fédération des Experts Comptables Européens) and EFAA (European Federation of Accountants and Auditors for small and medium-sized enterprises), this benchmark is a first. What is its aim? To present a realistic picture of the accountancy profession and, without going into comparisons or awarding medals right and left, obtain an overview of progress within the 24 institutes representing 22 countries which responded to this survey with respect to the valorisation of women capital and provoke exchanges and sharings of best practices.

Obtain an overview of progress within the 24 institutes from 22 countries which responded to this survey with respect to the valorisation of women capital and provoke exchanges and sharings of best practices.

The advantage of a benchmark is to generate dynamic movement without stigmatisation and making value-based judgements. We hope that this study will enable each member institute of FEE or EFAA to situate itself in a European context with respect to parity and maybe draw lessons for their own strategies in the field of the development and balance of human capital. AFECA would also like this initiative to be followed by other independent professions and incite them to undertake this sort of study, which can only reinforce collective action with respect to parity and professional balance.
The very different results from our study show the diversity of the profession in Europe. This diversity is a source of wealth but also complexity, for example, when it involves applying regulations or professional standards on the scale of the continent.

Beyond this, it would be inappropriate to imply causal links between factors, as each case is so individual. Thus, the existence of hard law that favours professional equality does not guarantee a higher level of women in the profession whereas soft law seems to be working in several countries. In the same way, no correlation could be established between the presence of women in accounting firms and on boards of companies. Finally, a geographical approach by zone (North/South...) is not a relevant indicator for feminisation in the studied profession.

Consequently, we wanted to avoid drawing general lessons from the results in this document, but rather present a collection of “key findings” as proposed below.

We would like to thank the institutes that we contacted for having identified certain key challenges. To make the findings legible, we have opted to present the information sheets country by country with a summary table at the end of the presentation.

Study methodology

The study was carried out with institutes making up the FEE and EFAA and 24 of them accepted to provide their data and participate in this benchmark.

In some countries with two professional institutes, FEE was asked to choose the institute that was the most representative of the profession. The United Kingdom is an exception with three institutes: ACCA, ICAEW and ICAS.
KEY FINDINGS

The legislative environments are very diverse
The majority of the countries (13) recognise the principle of gender equality in their law or even in their Constitution with respect to rights, pay and opportunities. Even more have voted in measures to fight against gender-based inequality (19). In the Czech Republic, on the other hand, there is no such law on the subject. The more specific subject concerning the presence of women on boards of directors also illustrates the diversity in approaching the subject: while no provision is made in some countries (Czech Republic, Romania, Poland, Ireland, Greece, Albania, Hungary, Turkey), some have established mandatory quotas (France, Switzerland, Netherlands, Belgium, Austria, Germany, Albania, Portugal, Italy) and, finally, others prefer soft law with voluntary targets (UK, Denmark, Spain, Sweden).

The professional contexts also differ
Certain institutes multiply initiatives to promote the attractiveness of the profession for women: the creation of dedicated associations or commissions, the establishment of charters with respect to best practices, flexible work organisation, events for networking or consideration about the valorisation of women capital, the taking into account of gender in recruitment policies, the establishment of directories and studies... Others have not established specific policies with respect to women (Georgia, Austria, Belgium, Greece, Germany, Spain, Hungary), sometimes undoubtedly because women are already well represented in the profession (Czech Republic, Romania, Poland).

The presence of women in the profession varies strongly
The average presence of women in the institutes studied shows a strong disparity: women CPA represent 25% in the French profession, 19% in the Dutch profession, 15% in the Swiss profession, but we have in the same time 64% women in Poland, 70% in Hungary and 77% in Romania.

The inclusion of women is increasing overall but at different rhythms
Even if figures concerning the progression of women could not be obtained with respect to all institutes, the overall tendency seems to be increasing in the 12 institutes solicited. Our study revealed that the percentage increase is concentrated over the last three years: +50% in Georgia, +8% in Scotland and Germany but in the same time we can notice +3% in France, +2.7% in Kosovo, +2-3% in Austria and +1.6% in Portugal.

CHALLENGES ..................................................................................................................... p.32
Gender equality in the profession

Actions to develop attractiveness, support and value woman human capital:

- Encouraging the participation of women in commission or working groups, committees.

Good practices currently being implemented within accountancy firms:

- Work from home - Flexible work hours - Part-time work.

National legal framework

Gender equality

Law on Gender equality in society (2008): regulates the equal treatment of women and men regarding equal chances and opportunities. Implements normative policies to promote gender equality in society.

Voluntary target for boards

Representation of over 30% of both sex in the decision-making process.
Gender equality in the Profession

No action to develop attractiveness, support and value woman human capital

Good practices currently being implemented within accountancy firms:

- Work from home
- Flexible work hours
- Part-time work
- Providing services allowing workers to achieve a better balance between work and family life

Challenges:

- Creating a family-friendly work environment, especially regarding part-time work and more flexible work hours
- Dealing with the fact that there is an audit season with long work hours, in which short deadlines have to be met and which do not allow for part-time work in many cases.

National Legal Framework

Gender equality

The Federal Equal Treatment Act for Civil Servants and Employees (1993): deals with working conditions of federal personnel as well as with career advancement for the least represented sex.

Quotas for boards in public sector

Existence of a 50% quota regulation: if female candidates for any position have the same qualifications as men, they have to be preferred until the group within the public sector organization shows a 50% women quota. This rule also applies for promotions and professional education programs.
Gender equality IN THE PROFESSION

ACTIONS TO DEVELOP ATTRACTIVENESS, SUPPORT AND VALUE WOMAN HUMAN CAPITAL:

Various initiatives to develop the attractiveness of the profession but none aim at women specifically.

GOOD PRACTICES CURRENTLY BEING IMPLEMENTED WITHIN ACCOUNTANCY FIRMS:

Work from home - Flexible work hours - Part-time work - Providing services allowing workers to achieve a better balance between work and family life.

CHALLENGES:

• Improving and promoting communication between men and women.
• Emphasizing female work efficiency and reducing pay gap.
• Promoting the profession attractiveness
• Changing people’s mentality
• Improving flexibility at work

National Legal Framework

GENDER EQUALITY

Pay Gender Gap Law adopted on April 2012: differences in pay and labor costs between men and women should be outlined in companies’ annual audit that will be publicly available.

QUOTAS FOR BOARDS

Quotas for boards of public and listed companies (Law of July 28th 2011): at least one-third of male or women members by 2012 for public companies, by 2017 for listed companies and by 2019 for listed SMB. Any appointment made after the deadlines that will not comply with the obligation will be cancelled.
Gender equality IN THE PROFESSION

NO ACTION TO DEVELOP ATTRACTIVENESS, SUPPORT AND VALUE WOMAN HUMAN CAPITAL

GOOD PRACTICES CURRENTLY BEING IMPLEMENTED WITHIN ACCOUNTANCY FIRMS:

- Work from home
- Flexible work hours
- Part-time work

48% of accountants are women

National Legal Framework

12% of boards members are women

GENDER EQUALITY
No legislation

NO VOLUNTARY TARGET NOR QUOTAS FOR BOARDS

28% of the Executive Committee members are women
Gender equality in the profession

Actions to develop attractiveness, support and value woman human capital:

Setting up a special committee on women in the auditing profession some years ago which is now closed.

Good practices currently being implemented within accountancy firms:

Work from home - Flexible work hours - Providing services allowing workers to achieve a better balance between work and family life

Challenges:

• Changing people’s mentality on parental leave: 12 months for women while men rarely go on paternity leave in the financial sector, especially in the audit sector besides the 2 weeks that are compulsory.
• Enhancing the value of flexible work hours

National legal framework

Gender equality

Financial Statements Acts (2013): introduce the same obligation on all national public companies and institutions to set realistic and ambitious targets for the gender composition in top-level management and formulate a policy oriented toward increasing the share of underrepresented gender.

Voluntary target for boards

Companies are required to set a share of the underrepresented gender in their corporate boards and the time-scale within which the company seeks to achieve that proportion.
Gender equality IN THE PROFESSION

ACTIONS TO DEVELOP ATTRACTIVENESS, SUPPORT AND VALUE WOMAN HUMAN CAPITAL:

- Setting up a special committee on women in the CSOEC
- Creation of AFECA (Association des Femmes diplômées d’Expertise Comptable Administrateurs) in 2011 which aims at enhancing woman human capital in the accounting profession (ranked in the Top 20 out of 400 French women organisations)
- Charter promoting professional equality by the enhancement of human capital initiated by AFECA
- Collaborative platform to collect and disseminate good practices
- Publication of a «Good practices guide» for accounting firms in 2016

GOOD PRACTICES CURRENTLY BEING IMPLEMENTED WITHIN ACCOUNTANCY:

- Work from home - Flexible work hours - Part-time work - Internal quotas - Promotion rules - Providing services allowing workers to achieve a better balance between work and family life

CHALLENGES:

- Reaching 50% of women in the association of chartered accountants by 2020-2025
- Reaching 50% of women named partners in accounting firms by 2020-2025

National Legal Framework

CIVIL SERVICE

The Law “Sauvadet” (2012) on the reduction of precariousness and professional equality between women and men: ensures progressive quotas for the appointment of women and men to positions as high-level civil servants.

GENDER EQUALITY

The “real equality between women and men” Bill (2014): includes a series of measures to address inequalities.

QUOTAS FOR BOARDS

The Zimmermann Cope Law (2011): mandatory quotas: 40% of women directors on boards by 2017 for listed companies (making at least 50 million euros in turn over and employing more than 500 workers).
Gender equality in the profession

No action to develop attractiveness, support and value woman human capital

Good practices currently being implemented within accountancy firms:
- Work from home
- Part-time work
- Providing services allowing workers to achieve a better balance between work and family

Challenges:
- Raising public awareness on gender equality
- Enforcing the law

Gender equality

Law for the Equal Participation of Women and Men in Leadership Positions in the Private Sector and the Public Sector (2015): aims at increasing the number of women in leadership positions in the private and public sectors. Includes a requirement to set aside 30% of the new board seats for women since 2016 for more than 100 companies that are listed.

Quotas for boards

Quotas for public and private companies: 30%.
Gender equality in the profession

No action to develop attractiveness, support and value woman human capital

Good practices currently being implemented within accountancy firms:

- Work from home
- Flexible work hours
- Part-time work
- Internal quotas (ad hoc basis)

Challenges:

- The high demands of the profession and the time constraints for the submission of the auditor’s report, which require long working hours, continuous training and studying in order to obtain the qualification and be technically competent at all times.

National Legal Framework

Gender equality

Principle enshrined in the Constitution: authorizes measures to promote equality between men and women and call for equal pay for work of equal value for all employees

Wide range of legislation promoting gender equality:

- Law 4097/2012 on the equal treatment between men and women engaged in an activity in a self-employed capacity;
- Law 3896/2010 on the equal opportunities and equal treatment of men and women in employment and occupational matters;
- Law 3769/2009 on the equal treatment for men and women as regards access to goods and services and their provision;

National Legal Framework

GENDER EQUALITY

The Constitution states that there should be no legal discrimination between men and women.

Act CXXV of 2003 on Equal Treatment and the Promotion of Equality of Opportunities: specifies groups of people to be protected, including women and mothers, names indirect discrimination as punishable and introduces the possibility of positive discrimination.

NO VOLUNTARY TARGET NOR QUOTAS FOR BOARDS
Gender equality in the profession

Actions to develop attractiveness, support and value woman human capital:

- Supporting qualified accountant women on their career path
- Organizing events to cover a range of topics related to woman human capital.

Good practices currently being implemented within accountancy firms:

- Work from home
- Flexible work hours
- Part-time work

Challenges:

- Overcoming gender stereotypes and/or actions that undermine women's work.

National Legal Framework

Gender equality

Employment Equality Acts 1998 to 2011: outlaw discrimination in employment on nine distinct grounds including gender. Cover discrimination in relation to access to employment, advertising, conditions of employment, equal pay for work of equal value, promotion...

Equal Status Acts 2000 to 2011: based on the principle that everyone has an equal right to participate in our society; provide protection against direct and indirect discrimination outside of employment on the same nine grounds.

No voluntary target nor quotas for boards

15% of boards members are women

40% of accountants are women
Gender equality in the profession

Actions to develop attractiveness, support and value woman human capital:

- Working committees in charge of gender equality issues established in all the territorial chapters in order to create a network to exchange ideas
- National database collecting résumés of registered women members of CNDCEC that are interested in being appointed to boards
- Collection at the national level of signs of discrimination to assess actions to promote gender equality
- Promotion of legal reforms to enhance gender equality

Challenges:

- Making the best of IT opportunities to manage professional work from home
- Overcome the cultural barrier
- Reaching equal pay for work of equal value although the gap is less significant for the younger generation
- Encouraging women to aspire to higher level of professional activities and governance positions
- Challenging cultural models where women are represented in certain roles which promote a negative image rather than a positive and professional one

National legal framework

Gender equality

Law on gender equality (2011): establishes a gender quota in the boards of directors for the least represented gender.

Quotas for boards

33.3% quotas for companies listed in the Stock Exchange. Non-compliance results in a warning, followed by financial sanctions and, in the case of continued non-compliance, the potential dissolution of the board.
Gender equality IN THE PROFESSION

ACTIONS TO DEVELOP ATTRACTIVENESS, SUPPORT AND VALUE WOMAN HUMAN CAPITAL:

Commitment to provide equal opportunities for both genders in terms of membership within the society as well as in the recruitment of staff in its executive office.

GOOD PRACTICES CURRENTLY BEING IMPLEMENTED WITHIN ACCOUNTANCY FIRMS:

Flexible work hours

CHALLENGES:

• Giving women the same support in terms of executing higher positions within a firm as their male colleagues.
• Challenging the idea that there is a conflict between work life and personal life.
• Increasing the visibility and advancement of women in the accounting profession.

National Legal Framework

ACTIONS TO DEVELOP ATTRACTIVENESS, SUPPORT AND VALUE WOMAN HUMAN CAPITAL:

Recruitment policy aims at a well-adjusted reflection of society, including male/female ratio.

GOOD PRACTICES CURRENTLY BEING IMPLEMENTED WITHIN ACCOUNTANCY FIRMS:

Work from home - Flexible work hours - Part-time work - Providing services allowing workers to achieve a better balance between work and family life.

CHALLENGES:

• Being more open to the specific wishes of women (and men) to combine work and family in a well-adjusted way.
• Too much focus on male qualities for promotions. Specific female qualities should be appreciated more in the profession.

National Legal Framework

GENDER EQUALITY

General Equal Treatment Act (1994): makes illegal for employers to favor people on the basis of personal characteristics such as gender.

Legislative Amendment to the Dutch Civil Code (2016) to increase the level of diversity in the boards of large companies.

VOLUNTARY TARGET FOR BOARDS

At least 30% of women (men) for large private companies in their board of directors and their supervisory board. If they do not comply, the board has to explain why they did not meet the target in their annual management report and what actions they will take to reach the target in the future.

GOOD PRACTICES CURRENTLY BEING IMPLEMENTED WITHIN ACCOUNTANCY FIRMS:

- Work from home - Flexible work hours - Part-time work.

CHALLENGES:

- Achieving a balanced representation of gender in boardrooms without compulsory quotas.

National Legal Framework

GENDER EQUALITY

Law 3/2007 on substantive equality between women and men: aims at eliminating the social obstacles and stereotypes standing in the way of achieving real, effective equality with legal measures to prevent discriminatory behavior. Introduces active equality policies in the public and private sector like the principle of “equal pay for equal work of equal value” and of a balanced representation of women and men in boardrooms.

Equality plans that cover different issues including gender pay gap, access to employment, occupational classification... Companies with over 250 employees are obliged to formulate and implement gender equality plans.

VOLUNTARY TARGET FOR BOARDS

40% of women in the private sector and public administration boardrooms “Good Governance Code of Listed Companies” written by the Spanish national securities market Commission which promote gender equality and set target to reach a balance representation of genders.

GOOD PRACTICES CURRENTLY BEING IMPLEMENTED WITHIN ACCOUNTANCY FIRMS:

Flexible work hours - Providing services allowing workers to achieve a better balance between work and family life.

CHALLENGES:

- Overcoming the reproduction process in recruitment at the top positions.
- Enhancing female role models in leadership for a more balanced recruitment.

National Legal Framework

GENDER EQUALITY

The Constitution and its fundamental law “The Instrument of government”: state that the public institutions shall combat discrimination of persons on grounds of gender.

Act concerning the Equality Ombudsman: creates a government agency that fights discrimination and protects equal rights and opportunities for everyone in the workplace, the school system and other areas.

VOLUNTARY TARGET FOR BOARDS

The Swedish Corporate Governance Code (set of guidelines for good corporate governance) recommends that companies should strive for gender balance on the board.
Gender equality in the profession

Actions to develop attractiveness, support and value woman human capital:

- Organization of networking events for women
- Extension of the maternity leave
- Role model function of EXPERTsuisse for the whole industry in offering part-time jobs (for both male and female employees), home-office facilities and having 50% of women in the extended board of management.

Good practices currently being implemented within accountancy firms:

- Work from home
- Flexible work hours
- Part-time work
- Providing services allowing workers to achieve a better balance between work and family life.

Challenges:

- Promoting part-time work for management jobs in order to enhance its social acceptance
- Developing child care facilities and financial support

National legal framework

Gender equality

The principle of gender equality was anchored in the federal Constitution in 1981.

The new gender equality law, in force since 1996, forbids discrimination in the workplace and includes provisions to facilitate equal opportunities at work.

Challenges

Achieving a balanced representation of men and women

- within the profession - among accountants but also among partners in the highest positions.
- in governance: in accountancy bodies, private companies and national institutions to increase the presence of female role models and help women aspire to leadership position.

Creating a working environment that promotes gender equality by allowing to reconcile work and private life. In a profession with high demands and time constraints, flexible work hours must be promoted and IT opportunities used. Workplace culture needs to change to measure performance on results not hours worked.

Reducing pay gap between men and women in accounting firms wherever it exists to create a positive work environment, make the best use of human resources and retain the best employees. It will also promote the development of a more equal and cohesive society.

Changing our perspective on gender roles

overcoming gender stereotypes and cultural models in education and the media.

Moving towards a European platform for co-action and exchanges in the accountancy profession by capitalizing on this survey which identifies and brings to the attention of the profession the innovative tools or initiatives developed by the institutes (like the Charter for gender equality and the guide of best practice for professional equality in France).

Achieving a balanced representation of men and women

• within the profession - among accountants but also among partners in the highest positions.
• in governance : in accountancy bodies, private companies and national institutions to increase the presence of female role models and help women aspire to leadership position.

Creating a working environment that promotes gender equality by allowing to reconcile work and private life. In a profession with high demands and time constraints, flexible work hours must be promoted and IT opportunities used. Workplace culture needs to change to measure performance on results not hours worked.

Reducing pay gap between men and women in accounting firms wherever it exists to create a positive work environment, make the best use of human resources and retain the best employees. It will also promote the development of a more equal and cohesive society.

Changing our perspective on gender roles
overcoming gender stereotypes and cultural models in education and the media.

Moving towards a European platform for co-action and exchanges in the accountancy profession by capitalizing on this survey which identifies and brings to the attention of the profession the innovative tools or initiatives developed by the institutes (like the Charter for gender equality and the guide of best practice for professional equality in France).

GENDER DIVERSITY in the European accountancy profession
